Confessed Murder of Anna Aumuller, He Says, to Save Dentist.

HE ADMITS SHAM INSANITY

Still another strange story told by Anna Aumuller, has been made public of the Khickerbocker, Astor, St. Regis, as a result of Schmidt's fight for a new trial. In a letter to Assistant District Attorney Delehanty, Schmidt says that he feigned insanity at his two trials and took upon himself the blame for her took upo death so as to protect friends. was written in the death house at Sing Sing. Schmidt says that he took the blame for the death of Anna Aumuller after an agreement entered into with Dr. Ernest Muret, a dentist, now in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta for counterfeiting. Muret's arrest and conviction grew out of the killing of Miss Aumuller.

There is an old German saying: 'Wer eliminal liegt, dem glaubt man nicht, und wenn er auch die Wahrheit spricht.' Taking this ground you will be more than justified in hammering a jury into unconsciousness on the topic of my untruthfulness and convince them easily that I am unworthy to be believed in anything. Yet it seems to me to be too easy and superficial a method to be taken advantage of by a man of your type. If the truth did not come out during the first trials, it was nobody's fault but my own, putting, according to the agreement at 301 St. Nicholas avenue, all hope for me and others in the insanity stunt, which worked all right with Mr. Jerome, but not with Mr. Delehanty.

"The consoling, if little flattering assurance of my 'friend,' Dr. Muret, did not come true: 'You just act natural and they all will agree with me that you are a fool with an exceptional ability to bring himself and his friends into trouble. You know very well that I did that confounded job at Bradhurst avenue only at your request. I had a hunch that the thing would come out wrong right from the beginning. I hope you are decent enough would come out wrong right from the beginning. I hope you are decent enough to leave me out of it. We all must agree, if it should come out, that she never was here and that I never saw her neither dead nor alive. I will help you in the insanity defence. It will be the easiest way out for all concerned. Otherwise it would be about twenty years in State's prison for manslaughter in the first degree for you and for me. With the insanity plea it will not come to any the insanity plea it will not come to any trial at all, but you will be sent to an asylum, where they will dismiss you after some time as cured.'

"This sounded to be a good programme. The first break in it was the unexpected arrest of Murct on account of my physical and mental collarse, after the death of and mental collapse after the death of Anna. Instead of cleaning up things, I sat at home like paralyzed, my limbs like dead. In consequence of that the detectives found easily things which led them to the photo-engraving studio at 134th street and then to Muret.

"But the outcome shows again how easy it is to convince people of one's thorough badness and perversity in spite of all 'esthetic' looks, which were accredited to me. All you have to do is sell tham so in a 'confession' and you will always strike a corresponding chord in the heart of your dear neighbor.

"Muret, after the shock of his own arrest was over, kept the agreement by saving he knew nothing about Anna and telling Dr. McGuire and Dr. Liebtenstein that the death of Anna was due to an act of insanity on my part, that I was certainly insane and that I had often told him I should like to be crucified like Christ, that I threw the money away like a prince, that I am a religious, blood-thirsty maniae, &c.

"I did my part by saying: There was no baby, Muret never saw Anna; he is an excellent man, he made only postal cards. I made the copper plates for the United States bills all alone, he knew nothing about it, he is quite innocent, only a victim of circumstances, &c.

Concerning the so-called mental experts, I think that they were very much mistaken on both sides. Rightly and truthfully they should have said: This Hans Schmidt is not legally insane, but a most astonishing darned fool and sublime jackass.' You, Mr. Delehanty, hit it about right, when, after some wrangling, you forced it out of the mouth of poor Dr. Leo: 'He is simply nutty.'
